

Comic Strip
zum Cafe

Create a four panel comic strip telling the story of a group of friends going zum Imbiss that also serves ice cream. Panels can be as small as a quarter of a piece of printer paper, hence four per sheet, or as large as a full sheet of paper. In any case, each panel needs:

1. Colorful settings and simple representations of people interacting. Some of you like to draw and draw very well, but keep these sketches simple and neat.
2. At least two balloons of dialogue, with clearly and neatly rendered text.
3. Themes to include in your comic strip: talking about foods, ordering the food, how things taste, expressing what you want and like, polite greetings and expressions.

Use materials in the classroom to decide on a format. Markers and various sized paper, including plain printer abound. Quietly get some materials, return to your seats and with your notes and books begin your strips. Plan accordingly; you'll finish these at home and they're due tomorrow.

Comic Strip
zum Cafe

Create a four panel comic strip telling the story of a group of friends going zum Imbiss that also serves ice cream. Panels can be as small as a quarter of a piece of printer paper, hence four per sheet, or as large as a full sheet of paper. In any case, each panel needs:

4. Colorful settings and simple representations of people interacting. Some of you like to draw and draw very well, but keep these sketches simple and neat.
5. At least two balloons of dialogue, with clearly and neatly rendered text.
6. Themes to include in your comic strip: talking about foods, ordering the food, how things taste, expressing what you want and like, polite greetings and expressions.

Use materials in the classroom to decide on a format. Markers and various sized paper, including plain printer abound. Quietly get some materials, return to your seats and with your notes and books begin your strips. Plan accordingly; you'll finish these at home and they're due tomorrow.